This game was created by indie game developer Zach Gage. Zach has taken inspiration from real-life events, such as the Amish "Victim", and incorporated these facts into the storyline. The story begins with a young Amish girl who is walking home through a stormy night. The game then follows her and her friends as they make their way back home through the dark, stormy woods. The gameplay is very simple. What you do in the game is walk and find the things that stand in your way. The things that stand in the way are called zombies. The zombies don't exactly appear and burst into your path. They appear in the form of trees and rocks. To walk through them, you have to solve puzzles. Each puzzle uses simple physics, like pushing a rock, or sliding a body of water in order to move on. Another huge part of this game is that you play as a girl named Kaitlyn. Kaitlyn is Amish and she is the main protagonist of the game. The story starts when she is in high school. Kaitlyn has a boyfriend whom she loves very much. Their relationship is the setting for many of the puzzles. The Amish way in which the game begins is fantastic. The story is told by Kaitlyn and her only witness to a life-changing event is her little brother. This in turn leads the player into the first puzzle. When walking through the woods, Kaitlyn and her family hear the screams of an Amish man, who is turned into a zombie. There are a few basic mechanics that you will find in the game. The Amish way of game-playing is to use the stick-poles you find in the world to push the objects around. The puzzles are very simple. You have to use your logic and to think on your feet. The very first puzzle you come across is the first one you solve. It is the race-car puzzle. She begins on a busy public road. She needs to cross the road and get to the tracks which is a narrow, winding dirt path. She needs to slide across the side of the road and climb up the side of the track in order to get to the other side. She has to keep sliding and climbing her way around the track in order to make it to the other side. She successfully makes it across the road and she is at the path. She has to move into the woods to continue on her journey. She easily makes it into the woods, but in doing so,

ONLY 10% PARTICIPANTS WERE ABLE TO CODE THE SAME APPLICATION. The but of it is, when participants tried to debug application, they got "Trying to debug non-app on a production server." message. So if you try to debug program on your laptop from production server, you will got that message. QUESTIONS How to detect this problem on runtime? Are there any solution except hot-reloading? NOTE I'm using OS X 10.9.5 and Xcode 6.3.2. A: There is no direct solution. There are some workarounds. If you can take shard of application, you can deploy this application to every platforms by your computer. If you can't, you can hot-reload. Hot-reload is mechanism that re-deploy all changes that you have made in developer machine. The only way that I know is Mix-mode deploy which has a feature that deploy current application to every computer at one time. Use Mix-mode deploy. This approach uses Xcode's "Mix-Mode" feature to deploy an IPA to one or more iOS devices at once by just selecting a "Mix-Mode" build configuration. It also makes the project automatically set up provisioning profile so a device can sign in. Note that all other options (“Build Configuration”,“Device Selection”,and “Provision Profile”) are unchecked so you must have Xcode configured to use that config after the fact. You can use Mix-mode deploy on your computer only not on production server. If you don't do that, your program will not run correctly on production server. Q: If f,g are measurable functions such that $f(t) \leq g(t)$ almost everywhere on $\mathbb{R}^n$, then is $f(x) \leq g(x)$ for almost all $x\in \mathbb{R}^n$? Motivation I am working on a question I found in a paper I was reading which says: Suppose φ is a probability density on $\mathbb{R}^n$, let $\rho(x) = \frac{1}{\varphi(x

When your body is stolen, you’ll need to discover who’s behind the crime, find them, and kill them. That is, if they haven’t already killed you. You’ll also need to cover your tracks, get your body back, and deal with the consequences of your actions. This is a murder mystery game about an early 20th century airborne vigilante. Your task: to locate and kill the engineer responsible for a series of horrific plane crashes. And keep in mind, the killer might be aboard the plane with you. D4: Dark Flight is a crime-slasher game, where you’ll be equipped with a whip and a pistol. When your plane goes down you'll need to dash, nimbly swing, and use those weapons to escape or take out your enemies… …unless they're passing on the left too closely. That's where the Whip is coming in handy. As with all crime-slashers, you can't be content with one kill – you need to make a complete mess of things, first killing or seriously injuring everyone on board and, if necessary, sending the plane crashing to the ground. The Whip is a powerful weapon and can easily carry out a kill shot – if you have the right move at the right time. Maybe it'll be easier to shoot enemies over the heads or across the room. Be careful. About This Game: Rogue's March is an action-adventure game set in an alternate 1930's Mexico. March is a band of nuns who take vengeance against the cartel hellbent on revenge. All the while, you're becoming their leader and evolving into a new kind of female hero. Features: A roguelike, to-the-end-or-not kind of game. 7 different endings. 4 different difficulties. Easy, normal, hard, and insane – each with their own specific objectives. No shooting in game. No high skill-required gameplay. And if that's not enough, here's a bit of lore from the developers: "Rogue's March is an emotional adventure. Welcome to the Bitter End, and never look back." About This Game: 'Clinging to the Silver Screen' is
