

In-game control has also been overhauled to include more realistic reactions to intelligent tackles from opponents. Progressing through the game is also made easier, thanks to contextual change-trees allowing players to select from a varied number of progression paths and specific events, making every title-winning strategy just a little different than the last. The game also introduces a new pitch refuel mechanic which allows players to continue to play games on the pitch and earn in-game currency all of their own, without having to leave the couch. New features will be further introduced to match packs during the season. "With the world's largest range of football games now on Xbox One and Xbox Game Pass, and as our esports competition continues to grow, we wanted to release the game that would deliver the most polished football experience, as well as those new features our fans are asking for - including in-game refueling and HyperMotion Technology," said Phil Spencer, head of gaming and Microsoft Studios. "The 16-year-old franchise is one of the best known globally, and it's great to be delivering this FIFA to fans, in the first season on Xbox Game Pass and alongside other Xbox Game Studios titles."
