What's new in Struggle:

 will be available in September on PC and Xbox One. Check out the announcement trailer below. [Snip]Casimero proves he's a great fighter with win over Gannon NEW BERN — The half-dozen or so observers who gathered to watch Armondo Casimero fight Mervin Gannon on Oct. 5 at The Arena in New Bern garnered a distinct reaction from the mat weight of the 21-year-old former New Bern High School standout. "You can't sit here and talk about how awesome you are. This happens once in a lifetime," Casimero said, referring to Gannon's easy defeated of the North Carolina "tour" fighter in New Bern. Casimero, an amateur fighter before the sport of jiu-jitsu began to gain attention throughout the United States, seemed to have no trouble landing consistent shots against Gannon early in the bout. His battering down of Gannon was only made possible, however, after Gannon feigned exhaustion while kneeling on the ground during an exchange, gaining the leverage he needed to take Casimero down. Casimero got up and launched a barrage of heavy, powerful punches to Gannon's head, beginning a 10-3 victory that included stoppages at the 2:11, 1:41 and 1:27 mark, on Casimero's knockout card. "He had a good punch," New Bern's Dave Damiano (6-1) said. "I don't think it was over yet, so it was a great comeback." To estimate the association of elevated maternal serum miR-122 with pregnancy complications in the first trimester of pregnancy. This prospective observational study included 570 pregnant women in the first trimester of pregnancy. Maternal serum levels of miR-122 were measured and demographic, obstetric, and clinical variables were recorded. Women were grouped into three subgroups: women with normal pregnancy (n = 344), women with pregnancy complications (n = 88), and women with both pregnancy complications and elevated serum miR-122 levels (n = 34). Pregnancy complications were grouped into the following subgroups: anemia, gestational hypertension, maternal diabetes, placenta previa, preeclampsia, intrahepatic cholestasis of pregnancy, and preterm labor. A nonparametric test (Kruskal-Wallis test) was used for the statistical analysis. Blood samples were collected from all women between 9 and 13 weeks of gestation. In women with pregnancy complications and elevated miR-122, 25.5% of the anemic women (24% of the gestational hypertension group, 35.3% of the maternal diabetes group, 15.6% of the placenta previa group, and 14.3% of the intrahepatic cholestasis of pregnancy group), 36.4% of the maternal diabetes group (38.6% of the preeclampsia group, 40% of the preterm labor group), and 45.9% of the preterm labor group (69.7% of the intrahepatic
