That data is then used to provide an AI-driven intelligence, which allows the simulator to know more about every specific situation, when the player can be tripped, when he could be dispossessed or when a free-kick could be directed in a specific direction. We got a chance to play with the new AI-powered features of FIFA 22 at EA's Menomonee Falls campus in Wisconsin. The new HyperMotion Technology gameplay elements are available in-game during gameplay in offline or online modes. An off-ball AI The off-ball AI is able to make a quick judgement on which player is the most likely to be targeted, based on numerical and situational factors. Off-ball AI knows where to go "Off-ball intelligence can quickly calculate which team is most likely to try and exploit the opposite side; who's likely to try to take the direct pass; who's likely to join in; and so on," says Dr. Carl Olson, executive producer of FIFA. If the AI thinks a specific player is most likely to be targeted by the opposite team, it will deviate from its average run and try and find a teammate, based on what that data tells it. The off-ball AI also anticipates where the ball is likely to go. In this way, it's like any passing football team, and the AI can tell when it's time to look to make a play on the ball, or to make an off-ball run. Off-ball AI makes analysis decisions in milliseconds "The off-ball AI is fully reactive to what's happening on the pitch, and its decisions are made in milliseconds," says Olson. The off-ball AI can, of course, also influence the decisions of the opposition players by making good runs and positioning decisions. Offline and online AI FIFA 22 introduces offline and online AI players for the first time. Offline AI is only available when a match is in online mode, and online AI is available when a match is being played online. Online AI does not feed off player statistics or match performance. It's a completely new AI set-up, with an emphasis on defensive tactics and pass blocking that adapts to the strengths and weaknesses of both teams. Offline AI can be enabled at any time when playing offline, and it

FIFA is the definitive football experience. Since its first release on the Atari 2600 in the 80s it has been enjoyed by millions around the world. Today FIFA is one of the most popular and richest football franchises in the world and is loved for its deep gameplay, authentic atmosphere, and detailed teams. Released on the Xbox and PS2 in 2001 the game has since continued to evolve with a new free-to-play model, regular content updates, DLC and seasons like 'The Journey' and 'The Widget'. FIFA gameplay FIFA is famous for its deep gameplay and its unique three-stage gameplay model. The first stage – Control – is where you influence the ball as you choose your shot and pass it to your teammates. The second stage – Attack – is where your players try to get the ball into the goal. The final stage – Win – is where the game is won or lost as you build a team of the best players, manage your tactics and use your stars to score goals and win the game. With FIFA's three stages of gameplay, there is something for everyone to enjoy and learn no matter what your skill level. Centre-Back is all about positioning. First team which doesn't want to turn away from opponent, but first reaction after received ball is advantage of central positions. Play like next we see almost all over CSKA Moscow. On defence he sit in gap between opponent two and one players, wide position and in front of goal. If opponent attack he just slip through ball and then try to defend it and prepare for next attack and so on. Sofiane Gangemi First team of CSKA Moscow. Centre back is first defender, which put centre back on zone of goal then second defender come and also try to keep zone clear from opponent. First and second defender have to win ball and pass it to striker, next striker pass ball to team-mate and the team who prevent zone by defender and who pass ball to other team-mate. After defender played soccer, he's not be under attention of opponent player, than opponent pass ball and try to shoot on goal. So defender must respect that player and don't concentrate on him. Sofiane Gangemi Striker of CSKA Moscow. He is third defender, and he is used for screen pass to striker. Second defender is for screen pass to striker. He is very important

Q: How to reference a class or control inside another class in Vue.js? I'm just getting started with Vue.js. I've got a project where the main HTML is something like this: Login

Then I have a class (let's call it "App") that is imported by my app.vue and contains functions to get and set the component values:

export default {
  data() { return { username: '', password: '', } }, methods: { setUsername(v) { this.username = v } }

Then I have a login button that when clicked needs to make a call to the App instance and set the username field to whatever the input value is. How can I do that? It looks like you can only access stuff in one file and not a class. How can I do this? A: If you are using v-model to bind the value of an input, you can just use brackets to access members of the component's data object as shown here. `function App() { return { name: 'jQuery UI Slider',`

---
