Site Under Construction Fantasy Grounds support Another weeks come and another Town Church. This was a Monday of a perfect week of 70F and a dull lazy summer routine with just a couple of errands and yard work and some long weekends. On to the game. This was a wash, basically just a shadow of the last session. I'm not going to list my moves this week, as they were largely very straightforward and predictable. In fact the moves were more or less all pre-determined per the goals set for me on the home game. Other than this, everything was a dead ringer. THIS GAME REQUIRES Fantasy Grounds support This week of moves was challenging to get in, but well worth it to get the session over with and play out the rest of the content for the duergar. I'm looking forward to grinding out the dwarf for some of the stuff I've been slowly rolling on (and having some hard cantrips for some quick wins), but for this week of runs at least, I had an uneventful game that went as expected and left no conditions ripe for several weeks. After the game it

I've got another five or six weeks of exercise with those before I start burning the five disciples. The training is slow and difficult and accomplishes about as much for me as running will for a person who is out of shape. I've finished most of it anyway, but I'm going to continue that for at least another week before I start back up with it. You can view the final portion of that here. CLOSURES Every week of moves, I leave out any Finale Campaign location which is a scheduled and expected street/area to be closed off permanently to traffic. This week though, I did not note any such closures. Unfortunately it seemed that good ol' utne hasn't quite sorted out that particular project yet. When they do,
