If you want to play this game without installing it on your computer you will need a dedicated server for cs 1.6.Q: JavaScript keypress event not firing on several newer browsers I've been working on a web page that requires some input. The default event handlers for a keypress only fires on IE9. I've had to use the attachKeypress method to get it to work. Is there any way to get the default event handlers to fire on newer browsers like Chrome, Firefox and Safari without using the attachKeyPress function? I can't remove the function altogether because of the other pages that rely on that.

Any help is much appreciated.

document.onkeypress = function (e) { if (e.which == 46 || e.which == 8 || (e.which
== 71 && e.charCode == 71)) { doSendMail(); } else { return false; } }; A: Have you tried adding keypress event to document instead of onkeypress? document is the root of all the dom's, so you'd be good to go. document.add EventListener('keypress', function(e) { // do your stuff

}); This works in newer browsers like Chrome. EDIT: This should really point to the eventlistener's method, not a typo.
