Download

When you're ready to reset the device, open the charging case and hold Volume up + Home + Power. The phone should now turn off and you should start hearing a BEEP tone. Now, as soon as the phone powers back on, insert the earbuds into the charging case. The device will now go to the Erase data screen. Tap the Erase Everything button to make sure you want to do a full factory reset and then tap Erase. Make sure that Turn off data and Turn off Wi-Fi are both selected before the process completes. Once the update is complete, remove the earbuds from the charging case, then remove the charging cable from the phone, place the Galaxy Buds case back on your phone and power on the device. You will be prompted to open the charging case, which you should do. There's a new firmware option available at the bottom of the panel and it should ask to update the firmware to the version you just updated to. Here are the steps you need to execute, one for your Samsung Galaxy S7 and one for your S7 Edge. It's important that you only perform this if the buds have stopped working, and you're willing to try the reset. Put the buds in their case, and plug them into the charger. Then, determine if the touch control works as well as before. Next, try to charge your phone, and let us know what happens. If nothing happens, double-check the settings in the Samsung Mobile App, and ensure they're set up correctly. Once the external USB Drive is shown in the phone and connected to it, Odin will show a firmware update screen similar to the one below. You can press and hold Start to start the upgrade process.
