STEAMPUNK!! The software is a hundred percent legit but the software does not give the designer the tools that they need for their job. This is a tool and has many more options that are needed. I have started to use PS versions 6 and 7 to create ad campaigns and have come across many things that are no longer available and have to go out and buy the more expensive versions of sofX to use certain features in my work flow. PS is a great product and would be 5 stars if it offered the tools that designers need to create a great campaign, a wellthoughtout vision, and a welldesigned campaign. Overall, for desktop work, I like Photoshop more than the GIMP, which I did like before. The UI is easier to navigate and mouse movement is faster. Layers behaves quite well (no switching modes as I've experienced with GIMP, and the flexibility can be used at different levels.) My only real bad experience was that the toolbox seemed to take quite a while "loading" when it was first launched. After some time, it "settled down" and now it takes a fraction of the time. The Blur Tool, for example, was much faster. The Gimp has a few more tools that Photoshop lacks (i.e. Thumbnail Maker, Font Tools/Filter Editor, etc.) but overall, most tasks can be achieved with (or within) Photoshop. The Layer Styles seems to be a happy medium between the Gimp's and Photoshop's settings. I love the Feather tool, but wish there were more control and granularity levels. Have discovered great hammers, brushes, textures, and more by exploring the Gimp's open source options.
